Writing Useful, Accessible, And Legally Defensible Psychoeducational Reports

Synopsis

• This book focuses on how to write a psychological report that is first and foremost helpful to consumers, while also being technically and legally defensible. Like the reports the authors describe, the book is carefully organized, beautifully written, and accessible to practitioners as well as graduate students. It is a brilliant accomplishment that should be required reading for every school psychologist.

This is an easy read with explicit advise for writing a sound report. My favorite part is where it states that an ideal report is 5-7 pages in length (no more than 10 pages). I know people who are writing 20 page reports and our current caseloads are not allowing that kind of time. There may be some suggestions that do not fit with your district's/state's requirements, but overall it is a good resource to have on hand and share with your psychs.

Very useful book that takes much of the guesswork of writing reports and shows you how to make them more user-friendly for first-level consumers (parents and teachers) who really need to understand what's going on, while not sacrificing the technical and legal imperatives.

This book is amazingly helpful. I've already started incorporating some of the ideas into my reports. I highly suggest this book to anyone writing reports in the field of education. Also if have a chance to go to a training with Jeanne Anne Carriere, she is a great speaker and very helpful in answering questions.

This is a very practical and useful book for those in the field. The examples given are clear and helpful in illustrating how to put the given strategies into practice. Highly recommended!
